Current assistive technologies often fall short in providing personalized and adaptive solutions to meet the diverse needs of individuals with disabilities. These technologies may lack real-time responsiveness, context awareness, and seamless integration with commonly used systems.